The plans to build this city was implemented in order to build a world class city in south Asia in terms of living standards, culture, design, energy etc. upon completion, the port city will be south Asia's leading residential, retail and business destination. We then go towards the Beira lake where you will see the lotus tower which is set to be the second tallest structure in south Asia. Afterwards we go past this large structure which is the old parliament. We then go along Galle face green which acts as a sub urban park for the public.

We then stop at the Gangaramaya temple which is one of Sri Lanka's most prominent temples. This temple is unique as it incorporates modern architecture along with Chinese, Indian and Thai architectural styles. Our next stop is the lotus pond (commonly known as the Nelum pokuna) is a large-scale theatre built by the former president of Sri Lanka and it is a fully equipped performance Centre for large scaled theatre productions. Right next to the Nelum Pokuna and the Vihara Mahadevi park is the green path which is a popular open-air venue for food fairs, street art, small scale musical performances and many other events in Colombo.

Just near green path is the Colombo public library which is the biggest public library in Sri Lanka. it was established over 90 years ago by combining two libraries, mainly the Colombo and pettah library.

Within the vicinity of the public library is the national museum of Colombo was founded on the 1st of January 1887 by Sir William Gregory, the British governor of Sri Lanka at the time. Our second stop for this tour is the independence square which was built in commemoration of the independence gained by Sri Lanka from the British. It is an extremely popular venue as it constantly crowded with people exercising or walking around this amazing location. Next, we proceed to Bandaranaike international memorial conference hall (BMICH) which is a convention center which was gifted by the Chinese government in memory of S.W.R.D Bandaranaike.

Finally, our last sight is the The revamped Old Dutch Hospital, which has been impressively restored and now holds eateries, bars, boutique stores and spas. Constructed four centuries ago, the building is a resounding example of colonial Dutch architecture with high ceilings, thick walls, large wide windows and terracotta tiled floors.

After Breakfast proceed to Galle.

Galle - Galle (pronounced gawl in English and gaar-le in Sinhala) is a living time capsule. It has a vibrant commercial district that's also shambolic and often charmless but passes through one of the Fort gates and you are transported back to the Dutch colonial era.

Built by the Dutch beginning in 1663, the 36-hectare Fort occupies most of the promontory that forms the older part of Galle. Described by the notoriously hard-to-please Paul Theroux as being 'garlanded with red hibiscus and smelling of the palm-scented ocean,' the Fort is an amazing collection of structures and culture dating back through the centuries. Just wandering the streets at random yields one architectural surprise after another. And be sure to take in the dramatic views of town and ocean from the encircling walls. UNESCO has recognized Fort as a World Heritage Site.
